

The NRRPT has been collecting feedback from candidates sitting for the exam for the last five years and part of the data collected includes the hours the candidate spent preparing to take the exam. As shown in the chart below, candidates that spent a minimum of a hundred hours of study time preparing for the exam had a better than 50% success rate while those candidates who spent less than one hundred hours studying for the exam had a less than a 50% pass rate.

